Account of a Remarkable Marriage Ceremony in a Wild Country.

I forget to say that the office of justice of the peace was not a salaried one, but dependent upon fees, the county furnishonly the copy of the revised statutes and a woolsack, slightly and prematurely bald. So while I was called Judge Nye, and frequently mentioned in the papers with great consideration, I was out of coal about half the time, and once could not mail my letters for three weeks because I did not have the necessary post-Friends in the eastern states may possibly recall the time when my correspondence, from some unknown cause seemed to flag. That was the time. Of course I could have borrowed the money, but I had, and still have, a foolish horror of borrowing money. I did not mind running an account, but I hated to bor-

The first business that I had was a marriage ceremony. I met the groom on the street. He asked me if I could marry people. I said that I could to a limited extent. He said that he wanted to get married. I asked him to secure the victim, and I would get the other ingredients. He then wished to know where my office was. It occurred to me at that moment that there was no fire in the stove; also, no coal; also, that the west half of the stove had fallen in during the night. So I said that I would marry them at their home. He maintained that his home was over eighty miles away and that it would consume too much time to go there.

"Where are you stopping at?' I inquired-using the Pike county style of syntax in order to show that I was one of the people.

"Well, we met here, squire. She come in on the Last Chance stage, and I'm camped up in Gov'ment canyon, not fur from Soldier crick. We can go out there, I reckon."

I did not mind the ride, so I locked my office, secured a book of forms and meeting the young people at the livery stable went out with them and married them in a rambling, desultory sort of way.

The bride was a peri from Owl creek, wearing moccasins of the pliocene age. The rich Castilian blood of the cave dwellers mantled in her cheek along with the navy blue blood of Connecticut on her father's side. Her hair was like the wing of a raven, and she wore a tiara of clam shells about her beetling brow. Her bracelet was a costly string of front teeth, selected from the early settlers at the foot of Independence mountain. With the shrewdness of a Yankee and the hauteur of the savage she combined the grotesque grammar of Pike county and the charming naivete of the cow puncher. She was called Beautiful Snow. But I think it was mostly in a spirit of banter. She was also no longer young. I asked her, with an air of badinage, if she remembered Pizarro but she replied that she was away from home when he came through. The cave dwellers were a serious people. Their plumbing was very poor indeed; so also were their jokes. Her features were rather classic, however, and-I was about to say clean cut, but on more ma-ture thought I will not say that. Her nose was bright and piercing. It resembled the breastbone of a sandhill crane.

The groom was a man of great courage and held human life at a very low figure. That is why he married Beautiful Snow without any flinching: also why I have refrained from mentioning his name; also why I kissed the bride. I did not yearn to kiss her. There were others who had claims on me, but I did not wish to give needless pain to the groom, and so I did it. He had no money, but said that he had a saddle which, if I could use, I was welcome to. I did not have anything to put the saddle on at home, but rather than return nded I took it.-Bill Nye in Century.

Love of Old England.

When Mr. Christie Murray started for Australia the anchor of his vessel in Plymouth sound brought up a quantity of Devon mud and ooze, which in the course of a day or two, under a summer sun, baked into a stiffish earth. Half by way of a sentimental joke and half seriously, he took a cubic inch or thereabouts of this English soil, placed it in an envelope, and determined to carry this morsel of old England with him on his travels.

Many months afterward a pastoralist up country, whose guest Mr. Murray was, begged this bit of earth from him. "You'll be going back there," he said, "and I never shall. I've been away from home for sixteen years and I'd value that bit of Old England more than the Kohinoor." "When next I passed his way," says Mr. Murray, "I' found that he had ridden sixty miles (out and home) to buy a little plush stand and a glass shade for the precious trifle."-London News.

He Excelled in One Thing.

"Did you ever get licked while you were a boy, papa?" asked Johnny.

"No," said papa emphatically.
"How was that?" queried Johnny piciously.

"Because, my boy, I was the fastest runner in the whole school."—Harper's
